

Latinos and Health Coverage: Mississippi by the Numbers

Latinos¹ are more likely to be uninsured than any other racial or ethnic group in the U.S. However, Hispanic families' access to health insurance varies by state (see Figure 1). In Mississippi:

- ❖ Latinos have inadequate access to the current health coverage system. In 2008, just over one-third (36.2%) of all Latinos living in Mississippi had employer-sponsored health insurance, and about one-thirteenth (7.5%) were covered by Medicaid or the Children's Health Insurance Program.²
- ❖ As a result, Latino families are at risk for uninsurance. That year, nearly one-half (48.7%) of all Latinos in Mississippi were uninsured, and more than two in five (43.1%) Latino children under age 18 had no form of health coverage.³
- ❖ Latinos are overrepresented among the uninsured. Although Hispanics made up 3.3% of the total state population in 2008, they represented 9.1% of Mississippi's uninsured.⁴
