Q47: Here is a definition of “prosperity”: Prosperity is what you aspire to day after day. A job that pays well and treats you with dignity. Paying rent without panic. Buying groceries or visiting a doctor without anxiety. Taking time off for family without risking everything. How achievable does prosperity, as described here, feel for you and your family in America today?

Q48: In your opinion, how well does the following statement describe the economic challenges facing Latino working-class families today? Latinos are working harder than ever — often multiple jobs — but falling further behind. Housing is out of reach. Health care is too expensive. Families are one unexpected expense away from a financial crisis. Hard work no longer guarantees a better life for your children. The ladder of upward mobility feels broken.
